

Rosh Hashanah

Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish new year, is a time of both joyous celebration and serious introspection. While welcoming a new year full of possibility, it also ushers in the Ten Days of Repentance – a period of reflection and atonement that culminates with the Yom Kippur fast.

Rosh Hashanah is commemorated with special synagogue services that include blowing the shofar, a large ram's horn, and reading from the Torah about the binding of Isaac. At home, the two-day celebration is often marked with large, festive meals. Traditional Rosh Hashanah foods include apples and honey, and round challah (bread) representing the eternal cycle of life.

Rosh Hashanah

Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish new year, is a time of both joyous celebration and serious introspection. While welcoming a new year full of possibility, it also ushers in the Ten Days of Repentance – a period of reflection and atonement that culminates with the Yom Kippur fast.

Rosh Hashanah is commemorated with special synagogue services that include blowing the shofar, a large ram's horn, and reading from the Torah about the binding of Isaac. At home, the two-day celebration is often marked with large, festive meals. Traditional Rosh Hashanah foods include apples and honey, and round challah (bread) representing the eternal cycle of life.

Rosh Hashanah

Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish new year, is a time of both joyous celebration and serious introspection. While welcoming a new year full of possibility, it also ushers in the Ten Days of Repentance – a period of reflection and atonement that culminates with the Yom Kippur fast.

Rosh Hashanah is commemorated with special synagogue services that include blowing the shofar, a large ram's horn, and reading from the Torah about the binding of Isaac. At home, the two-day celebration is often marked with large, festive meals. Traditional Rosh Hashanah foods include apples and honey, and round challah (bread) representing the eternal cycle of life.

Rosh Hashanah

Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish new year, is a time of both joyous celebration and serious introspection. While welcoming a new year full of possibility, it also ushers in the Ten Days of Repentance – a period of reflection and atonement that culminates with the Yom Kippur fast.

Rosh Hashanah is commemorated with special synagogue services that include blowing the shofar, a large ram's horn, and reading from the Torah about the binding of Isaac. At home, the two-day celebration is often marked with large, festive meals. Traditional Rosh Hashanah foods include apples and honey, and round challah (bread) representing the eternal cycle of life.

